PRESS NOTICE

LBMA FORECAST CONTRIBUTORS SEE AVERAGE PRICE OF $881 FOR GOLD IN 2009

Following are tables summarising the results of Forecast 2009, the LBMA's annual survey of opinions from precious metal participants on the direction of prices for the coming year. A total of 25 contributors have given us their estimates for the high, low and average price for 2009 for gold, silver, platinum and palladium, based on the London fixings, with a brief commentary on the major influences and activity for each metal covered.

Given the upheavals of the last six months, it is not surprising that the forecast prices are mixed. Gold is the only metal where the forecast average has increased from 2008, and the range of prices indicates another volatile year for gold. In gold, the forecast average has increased only slightly from 2008's average of $862.33 to $880.74 and in silver the average has dropped slightly from $15.174 to $11.578. However, forecast averages for PGMs have fallen sharply, in platinum from $1,557.45 to $995.60 and in palladium from $376.86 to $217.89.

Last year the most bullish forecasters for gold rightly predicted that the metal would hit above the $1,000 mark, which it did for three days in March (record high of $1,023.50). This year, 75% of forecasters expect gold to hit record highs again, with a predicted average high of $1073.54. However, as in 2008, prices are expected to also reach an average low of $721.46. In silver, the most optimistic forecasters last year felt that the market would reach the $20 mark – however, the actual high for silver of $20.92 surpassed last year's forecast high of $15.174. This year, the most bullish contributors in silver are again expecting the market to reach the $20 level. In platinum, however contributors are predicting only $1263.25 as the average high. In palladium, contributors see the market reaching its peak at $291.20.

The full survey, including the commentaries, will be published next week and will also be posted on the LBMA website at:
